Social Work Environment: I lead a small team within a large company. This allows me to know the people I work with as we complete large projects and still earn the benefits only prone to large companies.

Physical Work Environment: While the company is within the city, it is easily accessible. The company specializes in software and international branches that all work to create a specialized product for international clients.

Personal Relationship: If I have met someone, things have progressed nicely. If not, continued casual dating. I honestly do not care.

Live: I own a house outside the city next to some woodland, part of which is on my property.

Commute: 20 minutes from my house to the company in my car.

Car: I own a dark green, relatively new model of the Honda Accord.

Fun: I pass the time with video games in the sunroom, books, and lounging on my deck when the weather is nice. I enjoy cooking but will likely eat out often as well.

Parenting: I have no kids.

Extended Family: I see my extended family on holidays. My parents and sister visit me/I visit them more often than just the holidays.

Friends: I have made some new friends with my coworkers at work, but still spend time with those from high school and college. Some of them have moved, but we still play games through Xbox Live and other such online mediums.

Health: I have a small workout room outfit with enough to allow me to continue my typical workout routine. I eat healthy, but I do not take my diet or exercise to any crazy extreme.

Insights

This exercise has put quite a bit into focus. Though some objects here (such as diet and exercise) is a matter of continuing my current routine. Others will need more focus. Finding a company that meets my requirements will not be easy. I could start with a company that meets some requirements and move to another whenever I find a company that meets more of the requirements.
